Department of Labor and Workforce Development

According to the U.S. Census, overall state government tax collections increased $34.3 billion from fiscal year 2011 to a record $794.6 billion in 2012. The previous high for overall state tax collections was $779.7 billion in 2008. State tax revenue is up 13.0 percent from $703.4 billion in 2010, which was the lowest collected total since 2005. (State tax figures are represented as current whole dollars and are not adjusted for inflation.)

Overall state tax revenue on individual income was $280.4 billion for 2012, up 8.1 percent from 2011, while general sales tax revenue was $242.7 billion for 2012, up 2.9 percent from 2011. License tax revenue increased to $54.0 billion for 2012, up 4.7 percent from 2011. Individual income tax revenue, general sales tax revenue, and license tax revenue comprised 72.6 percent of all state government tax collections nationally.

These new statistics come from the 2012 Annual Survey of State Government Tax Collections. This survey provides an annual summary of taxes collected by all 50 states that fall broadly into categories such as compulsory fees, property taxes, sales and gross receipts taxes, license taxes, and income taxes. Statistics are further broken down into 25 subcategories that cover collection on items such as motor fuel taxes, severance taxes, and hunting license taxes. Tax revenues also include related penalty and interest receipts of the governments.

Forty-six states saw an increase in total tax revenue in fiscal year 2012, led by North Dakota (47.0 percent), Alaska (27.3 percent), Illinois (19.1 percent), Connecticut (15.0 percent), Hawaii (13.6 percent), Oklahoma (13.5 percent), Texas (12.6 percent), and South Dakota (10.3 percent). Only North Carolina, California, Wisconsin, and New Jersey showed decreases (9.9 percent, 7.9 percent, 5.8 percent, and 0.6 percent, respectively).

Alaska and North Dakota's, increased tax revenue was largely due to strength in severance tax revenues. Severance taxes are collected for removal or harvesting of natural resources (e.g., oil, gas, coal, timber, fish, etc.). This tax increased by $4.2 billion in 2012, a 29.0 percent increase from 2011. California's tax revenue decline was due to expiration of the temporary rate increase for the general sales and gross receipts tax. In 2012, the South region collected the largest amount of general sales tax revenue at $89.5 billion.

While all states rely on various types of selective sales taxes, five states (Alaska, Delaware, Montana, New Hampshire, and Oregon) do not levy a general sales and gross receipts tax. Regarding income taxes, seven states (Alaska, Florida, Nevada, South Dakota, Texas, Washington, and Wyoming) do not impose individual income taxes and four states (Nevada, Texas, Washington, and Wyoming) exclude corporation net income from taxation.

States with the largest percentage increase in revenue from individual income taxes were Illinois (39.8 percent), Hawaii (23.5 percent), Oklahoma (16.3 percent), and Connecticut (13.9 percent).

Motor vehicle license tax revenue increased $1.1 billion in 2012, a 4.9 percent increase from 2011. This followed a 4.0 percent increase from 2010 to 2011. Motor vehicle license taxes are imposed on owners or operators of motor vehicles,
