New York continued to be the nation's most populous city, with 8.4 million residents, according to population estimates by the U.S. Census Bureau. This was more than twice the population of Los Angeles, which ranked second at 3.8 million. Chicago, with 2.9 million, was third, followed by Houston (2.2 million) and Phoenix (1.6 million).

New York led the nation's cities in numerical increase during the 2007-2008 period, adding more than 53,000 residents. New Orleans, which had the largest growth percentage (8.2 percent), had the seventh largest numerical growth. Four Texas cities were among the 10 largest numerical gainers: Houston (third), San Antonio (fifth), Fort Worth (sixth) and Austin (ninth). Two California cities — Los Angeles (fourth) and San Diego (10th) — made the top 10, as did second-ranked Phoenix. Rounding out the list was eighth-ranked Chicago, which experienced its second straight year of population increase after five consecutive years of decline.

New to the list of the 25 most populous cities in 2008 was Denver, 24th with a population of 598,707, up three spots. In addition, San Francisco moved to 12th, Austin to 15th, Charlotte, North Carolina, to 18th and El Paso, Texas to 21st. Nashville-Davidson, Tennessee (a city-county consolidation) fell out of the top 25.

2000-2008 Changes

McKinney, Texas, was the nation's fastest-growing city between April 1, 2000, and July 1, 2008, as its population more than doubled to 121,211. Gilbert, Arizona, was second, as its population climbed 88.7 percent to 216,449. North Las Vegas, Nevada; Port St. Lucie, Florida; and Victorville, California; rounded out the top five. Seven of the top 25 were in California: Victorville, Elk Grove, Irvine, Roseville, Moreno Valley, Rancho Cucamonga and Bakersfield.

New York City was the largest numerical gainer, adding 355,432 residents over the period. Houston, which added 288,562, was second, followed by Phoenix (246,879). New Orleans experienced both the largest rate of loss and largest numerical decline during the period, as its population fell 35.7 percent (from 484,674 to 311,853). This was due to the effects of Hurricane Katrina. Flint, Michigan, had the second greatest rate of loss (down 9.6 percent, from 124,943 to 112,900), followed by Cleveland (down 9.3 percent); Buffalo (down 7.4 percent); and Pittsburgh (down 7.3 percent). Philadelphia ranked second in numerical decrease (-70,155), followed by Cleveland (-44,655), Chicago (-42,902), and Detroit (-39,208).
