AT&T U-verseSM

AT&T is introducing U-verse services in Tennessee thanks to the Competitive Cable and Video Services Act of 2008 that was implemented by the General Assembly and signed by Governor Phil Bredesen last year. This legislation provides an environment that encourages new video providers, such as AT&T, to invest in Tennessee to compete against incumbent cable providers. On the first day that this new law became effective, AT&T filed its initial application for a state-issued certificate of franchise authority to offer video services in communities across the state.

You are personally invited to join Gregg Morton, president, AT&T Tennessee, to celebrate the arrival of AT&T U-verseSM TV in Nashville and Middle Tennessee.

Come celebrate with AT&T and the Tennessee General Assembly to see for yourself why AT&T U-verse TV, a 100 percent Internet Protocol-based TV service, is so cool...
