The Beer Tax Reform Act of 2013, filed Jan. 29 by Sen. Brian Kelsey (R-Germantown) and Rep. Cameron Sexton (R-Crossville), proposes to modernize Tennessee beer tax with a simple modification: It would calculate wholesale tax on volume rather than price and solve Tennessee's odd (and nationally unparalleled) tax policy.

The statewide Fix the Beer Tax Campaign launched in Nashville on Jan. 30 and has rallied in Memphis, Knoxville, Johnson City and Chattanooga. On Monday night, the campaign will rally just steps away from the Capitol.

WHAT: A rally in support of the Beer Tax Reform Act of 2013

WHEN: Monday, March 11, 5-8:30 p.m.

WHERE: The Standard, 167 Rosa L Parks Blvd Nashville, TN 37203

WHO: Sen. Brian Kelsey; Rep Cameron Sexton; Tennessee Malt Beverage Association; Anheuser-Busch; National brewers, importers and Tennessee craft brewers; hundreds of beer enthusiasts

WHY: A fair beer tax

"Tennessee is beyond the tipping point," said Rich Foge, president of Tennessee Malt Beverage Association. "The current tax policy allows the tax rate to rise unchecked at such a dramatic rise that it is now impacting competitiveness, economic opportunity and costs and choice for consumers. It's time to modernize this old tax and make it right."

Hope to see you and your friends there!
