Tennessee Higher Education County Profiles 2011: Notes and Data Definitions

The Tennessee Higher Education County Profiles 2011 provide basic information with respect to higher education for each county in Tennessee. The 2011 Profiles represent the fifth year for this report.

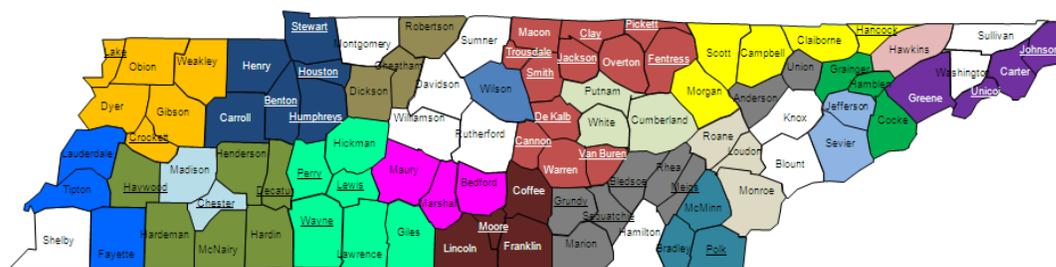

The 2011 Profiles employed the U.S. Census Bureau’s American Community Survey (ACS) as one of the primary data sources to provide current demographic information each Tennessee county. Specifically, the following indicators utilize the ACS:

- Median Family Income
- Per Capita Personal Income
- Percent of Population in Poverty (18-64 Year Olds)
- Percent of Adult Population with High School Diploma or Higher (Age 25 and up)
- Percent of Adult Population with Associates Degree or Higher (Age 25 and up)
- Percent of Adult Population with Bachelors Degree or Higher (Age 25 and up)
- Adult College Enrollment Percentage

The ACS is an ongoing survey that reaches approximately 3 million people per year. The survey asks respondents questions about age, sex, race, family, income, education, veteran status, disabilities, work and cost of living. ACS releases data in one, three and five-year averages. At the time of this report’s analyses, the 2007-2009 three-averages represented the most complete data available. Unlike the decennial census, ACS three-year reports cannot provide estimates for counties whose population is less than 20,000, which excludes 32 of Tennessee’s 95 counties. Where county-level data was not available, regional averages were applied.

For counties with populations of less than 20,000, five years of data are necessary to produce county-level demographic estimates. Since the five-year averages were not available during the creation of this report, regional three-year averages were applied for those small counties in this report. Such regions are called “Public Use Microdata Areas” (PUMA), which are determined by the Census Bureau and usually consist of multiple counties. The picture below shows boundaries for each PUMA region and counties for which our 2011 report used regional-level data.

PUMA Regions

County with Underline: PUMA’s regional data were applied for this county in this year’s report
County with No Color Background: Form a PUMA as one county.

Note:

1. Part of Sullivan county is under the PUMA region of Hawkins county
2. Part of Sumner county is under the PUMA region of Wilson county
3. Part of Hamilton county is under the PUMA region of Marion county
