OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

Opinion No. 16-20

Authority of the Tennessee Attorney General to Conduct an Investigation of a Member of the Tennessee General Assembly

---

Question 1

What constitutional, statutory or other authority exists to authorize the Attorney General of the State of Tennessee to conduct an investigation of a member of the Tennessee General Assembly? To the extent that no express delegation of investigative authority exists, what precedent exists to support the existence of such authority? To the extent that such authority exists, what is the scope of such investigative authority?

Opinion 1

Article II, section 12, of the Tennessee Constitution gives each House of the General Assembly the power to “determine the rules of its proceedings” and to “punish its members for disorderly behavior.” The investigation that gives rise to Question 1 was expressly authorized by resolution of a committee of the Tennessee House of Representatives pursuant to article II, section 12. The resolution narrowly defines the scope of the investigation and specifies that the authorization to investigate may be modified or revoked at the discretion of the committee.

Question 2

What authority exists to authorize the Attorney General of the State of Tennessee to investigate alleged ethical violations by a member of the Tennessee General Assembly?

Opinion 2

See Opinion 1.

Question 3

If the Attorney General of the State of Tennessee engages in an investigation of a member of the Tennessee General Assembly at the request of one or more members of the Tennessee General Assembly, do all members of the Tennessee General Assembly have a right to obtain copies of any investigative updates or reports?

Opinion 3

Whether all members of the Tennessee General Assembly have a right to obtain copies of “any investigative updates or reports” is an internal matter to be determined by the legislature as part of the rules of its proceedings.

Question 4

If it is believed that the Attorney General of the State of Tennessee has engaged in unethical, ultra vires, or other inappropriate conduct, who has the standing and legal authority to investigate the Attorney General of the State of Tennessee or his staff?

Opinion 4

The committee has full discretion to revoke the authority vested in the Office of the Attorney General at any time. Thus, if it is believed that the Attorney General has acted outside the scope of that authority, the committee may revoke the authority.

ANALYSIS

It is a matter of public knowledge that these questions have been asked in the context of an investigation into allegations of disorderly and inappropriate behavior on the part of Representative Jeremy Durham.<sup>1</sup> The Attorney General was appointed and designated to conduct the investigation by a Resolution (copy attached), adopted on February 8, 2016, by the Article II, Section 12 Ad Hoc Select Committee of the Tennessee House of Representatives. Thus, the Office of the Attorney General is currently conducting that investigation pursuant to an express authorization from the Tennessee House of Representatives.

Article II, section 12, of the Tennessee Constitution gives each House of the General Assembly the power to “determine the rules of its proceedings” and to “punish its members for disorderly behavior.” Pursuant to article II, section 12, of the Tennessee Constitution and the statutory provisions cited in the Resolution, the House of Representatives specifically authorized the Attorney General to conduct the Durham investigation. The authorization is explicitly subject to amendment and even revocation at any time at the discretion of the House Select Committee.

The terms, conditions, and scope of that authorization are delineated in the Resolution. Since the Committee has the right to revoke the authorization at any time in its discretion, it follows that, if it is believed that the Attorney General has acted outside the scope of the authority vested in the Attorney General, the Committee has the standing and power to revoke the authority.

The Resolution requires that the Attorney General report the findings of the investigation to the Select Committee at the conclusion of the investigation. Whether all members of the Tennessee General Assembly have a right to obtain copies of “any investigative updates or reports”

<sup>1</sup> See, e.g., “Durham probe is a ‘witch hunt,’” The Tennessean, Sunday, May 22, 2016, p. 6A (“On Tuesday, Rep. Rick Womick, R-Rockvale, sent a letter to Attorney General Herbert Slatery’s office asking for an ‘immediate opinion’ on what authority Slatery has to investigate Durham, R-Franklin.”) is purely an internal matter to be determined by the legislature as part of the rules of its proceedings.
