Pursuant to Tenn. Code Ann. § 68-105-115, I am not currently a full-time employee of a registered blasting firm AND (check one):

I have attached a current liability insurance policy that includes blasting coverage in the minimum amount of one million dollars ($1,000,000), because I intend on detonating explosives during the licensing period.

I have not attached a current liability insurance policy that includes blasting coverage in the minimum amount of one million dollars ($1,000,000), because I do not intend on detonating any explosives in any blasting operation. I understand that prior to detonating any explosives in any blasting operation, I must either: (1) become employed by a blasting firm registered by the Department, or (2) obtain a current liability insurance policy that includes blasting coverage in the minimum amount of one million dollars ($1,000,000), during all blasting operations. Please provide an explanation for why you are seeking to obtain licensure but do not intend to detonate any explosives (for example, maintaining license for professional reasons) so that the Department may ensure that you do not fall within an exception to licensure and that the current liability insurance policy is not required:
