

William Bradley (Brad) Hawkins, PhD, MPH.....Vanderbilt University
Master of Public Health Practicum Director

W. Bradley Hawkins is the Practicum Director for the Vanderbilt University MPH program. Dr. Hawkins received his PhD and MPH from Tulane University School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine. His research interests have been focused on assessing and to characterizing environmental parameters that contribute to chronic exposures in communities while addressing population health to decrease exposures to environmental hazards. Serving as a Fulbright Scholar (2012-13) to Suriname, he coordinated and instructed the Anton de Kom University of Suriname's Master of Public Health (MPH) program along with managing joint NIH research projects between Tulane and Suriname.

