Request for Removal

The McNutt-McReynolds House was listed in the National Register of Historic Places on July 25, 1989. As shown on aerial images, the house disappeared sometime between December 2003 and April 2006. It is not known when or why the house was destroyed. As of 2021, there is a carport and a shed on the property, but it is otherwise vacant and appears to be used for parking or storage. The McNutt-McReynolds House is not extant and has lost the characteristics for which it was listed. Therefore, it should be removed from the National Register of Historic Places.
