Request for Removal

Manchester Cumberland Presbyterian Church was listed in the National Register of Historic Places on June 29, 1992 for its Architectural Significance. The church is no longer extant. It is unknown when or why the building was destroyed. Google Earth satellite photos show the building was still extant in 1997 but was gone by 2003. Because the building is no longer extant, the Manchester Cumberland Presbyterian Church has lost all characteristics for which it is listed. Therefore, it should be removed from the National Register.
