Dr. Freida Hopkins Outlaw, Chief Nurse and Assistant Commissioner of Special Populations and Minority Services at the Tennessee Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities, was recently inducted as a Fellow into the American Academy of Nursing. Fifty-six nurse leaders received AAN’s prestigious honor this year including three nurses from outside the United States.

Only nurses who evidence significant national and/or international contributions to nursing and health care are considered for Academy membership and each must be sponsored by two current Academy Fellows. Selection is based on the presentation of evidence of the nominee's work in improving nursing practice and health policy and as well as capacity to make contributions in the future. The mission of the Academy is to serve the public and nursing profession by advancing health policy and practice through the generation, synthesis, and dissemination of nursing knowledge.

Outlaw joins TDMHDD Commissioner Virginia Trotter Betts as an AAN Fellow. Betts was inducted as a member in 1997.

“Along with the 520 nurses of the department, I am truly honored to have the opportunity to work with Dr. Freida Hopkins Outlaw. Her experience and expertise in the field of nursing and mental health is excellent, and her dedication to improving mental health care for all is reflected in her many accomplishments here at TDMHDD and throughout the nation,” stated TDMHDD Commissioner Virginia Trotter Betts. “AAN could not have chosen a more qualified professional nurse to become a new Fellow.”

Dr. Outlaw received her Baccalaureate in Nursing from Berea College, Masters in Psychiatric Nursing from Boston College and a Ph.D. from the Catholic University of America. She has over forty years of experience as a clinician, researcher, educator, and policy maker in public mental health service delivery. Dr. Outlaw has written extensively in the areas of cultural diversity, management of aggression, seclusion and restraint, and the role of religion, spirituality and the meaning of prayer for people with cancer. Since 2004, she has received three

Governor Phil Bredesen Honors State Employee Veterans

On November 28 and 29, mental health leaders from 12 southern states joined SAMHSA and NIMH representatives at a conference addressing science to service in Nashville. Hosted by TDMHDD, a major goal of the meeting was to help fill some of the gaps in bringing science to service and to strengthen partnerships on the federal, state and local level.

These enhanced partnerships between stakeholders will foster improved communication to assist in the implementation of the recommendations and outcomes of this conference.

The states represented were West Virginia, Kentucky, Virginia, North Carolina, Texas, South Carolina, Arkansas, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Tennessee.

The Tennessee Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities announces the recent completion of a major technology upgrade to maintain and process critical patient information that surpasses the capabilities of the prior system and is already proving to be cost-effective.

Patient records have been converted from an aged, outdated software program to a new Avatar system. This Web-based program maintains a centralized data system for all five Regional Mental Health Institutes located across the state.

Prior to this major implementation, a main patient database was maintained in the Nashville central office, and patient information was entered into separate systems at the five RMHIs. Data was transmitted on a daily basis via network from each RMHI to the central database, a process that consumed an ever-increasing number of man-power hours.

RMHI staff can now enter data into one integrated system, located at the State’s Data Center in Nashville, which provides real-time information for all users that include census, admissions, discharge and transfer information, as well as more advanced billing capabilities. Avatar offers greater flexibility in capturing and using information. The new system also permits TDMHDD to be up-to-date and remain current with constantly-evolving Medicare requirements.
State Receives Funds to Benefit Youth in Eight Rural Tennessee Counties

The Tennessee Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities was recently awarded $2.5 million from the national Administration for Children and Families to benefit Tennessee’s youth in eight rural counties over the next five years. The award is the result of a collaborative effort between TDMHDD, the Tennessee Department of Children’s Services, the Governor’s Office of Children’s Care Coordination, the Administrative Office of the Courts and Centerstone.

This initiative, Partners for Family Strengthening and Preservation, will ensure integrated services are provided for children, ages 0-18, who are in or at risk of an out-of-home placement as a result of a parent or caretaker who is abusing meth or other substances. Funds will allow therapists to provide intensive, in-home crisis intervention, counseling, life-skills education and referral for substance abuse and/or mental health treatment as well as other support services. Specialized training and the collaboration of service providers and other stakeholders will result in improved coordination of these much needed services.

“Too often children in rural counties do not receive much needed services due to lack of access to well-trained professionals needed to provide assistance,” said TDMHDD Commissioner Virginia Trotter Betts. “I am extremely pleased with the result of this collaborative effort. I know we can continue to work together in bringing funds to the areas that need it most, benefiting Tennessee’s most vulnerable population, our children.”

“Coming into state custody can be very traumatic for a child. This program will help reduce that trauma by helping youth stay in the home safely instead,” said Dr. Viola P. Miller, commissioner of the state Department of Children’s Services. “We need to do all that we can to keep families together – and to keep children safe.”

A seamless continuum of care will be available for 270 families residing in Bedford, Cannon, Coffee, Franklin, Grundy, Lincoln, Moore and Warren counties. “Meth use is at crisis level in parts of Tennessee. Centerstone welcomes this great opportunity to offer in-home intervention, counseling, life-skills education and behavioral health services for this imperiled population,” said David C. Guth, Jr., CEO of Centerstone. “Through this new program, Centerstone will expand services to ensure the safety and well-being of children and their families affected by methamphetamine and other substance abuse.”

To combat the problem of methamphetamine abuse in Tennessee, Governor Phil Bredesen signed the Meth-Free Tennessee Act into law in 2005 following intense study by the Governor’s Task Force on Methamphetamine Abuse.

Mental Health TV Special in East Tennessee

The Mental Health Association of East Tennessee and WATE-TV worked closely with area mental health providers and organizations to compile seven feature stories about mental health and substance abuse as part of a series leading to a one-hour Mental Health Special on November 1st. These feature stories ran throughout the week. Led by WATE TV anchors Lori Tucker and Don Dare and Ben Harrington from the Mental Health Association, the coverage focused on the fact that mental illness is real, diagnosable, and treatable and that recovery is achievable. The feature stories shared numerous treatment successes and recovery stories of East Tennesseans engaged in programs at Ridgeview, Helen Ross McNabb Center and Peninsula.

Additional stories shared details of key outreach programs like Mental Health 101 in area schools, law enforcement training and how families cope with mental illness across generations of family members. The stories may be viewed on www.wate.com.

In addition to the stories, MHA coordinated a phone bank staffed with volunteer professionals to directly assist more than 100 callers. WATE linked MHA’s free online screening tools to their Web site and Lori Tucker gave instructions on accessing the free and confidential screenings for depression, bipolar disorder, anxiety and PTSD. In the month following the program, 435 people completed mental health screenings with 69 percent testing positive for mental illness.

Haley’s Park Dedication Opens Homes for Consumers

On November 1, 2007, Park Center, Inc. dedicated Haley’s Park, a fourteen unit one-bedroom apartment complex and two-bedroom resident manager’s apartment at 3015 Lebanon Pike, Nashville, located adjacent to the Middle Tennessee Mental Health Institute and leased for 75 years from the Tennessee Department of Mental Health and Developmental Disabilities. Haley’s Park is named for the former Park Center board chair and mental health advocate, George Haley. The new facility will offer housing for mentally ill persons who are in recovery and able to live independently and need a home.

Park Center officials praised TDMHDD Deputy Commissioner Joe Carobene as an instrumental player in bringing the project to reality. TDMHDD Director of Housing and Homeless Services, Bob Currie, was also honored for his hard work by having a room in the facility named after him.

Cumberland Heights Completes Frist Family Life Center

Cumberland Heights has treated more than 67,000 patients, from 50 states and a number of foreign countries, who range from indigent and unemployed individuals, business people and government employees to nationally recognized personalities from the sports and entertainment industries.

Road to Freedom 2007 Bus Comes to Nashville’s Frist Center for the Visual Arts

The Road to Freedom tour bus completed a year long track through the 50 states in November to chronicle and explain the history of the grassroots “people’s movement” leading to the passage of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). Through onboard exhibits, the bus showcases the struggle for disability rights, past and present, while promoting educational and economic opportunity for children and adults with physical, mental, cognitive, sensory and developmental disabilities. The bus arrived at the Frist Center for the Visual Arts on October 31, 2007, where a photographic exhibit relating to the tour was on display. On hand to welcome the bus were Nashville Mayor Karl Dean and Councilman Darren Jernigan, the first Metro councilman with a physical disability to be elected. Dean was Nashville’s law director and worked to ensure that the city’s government was in compliance with ADA regulations. Jernigan of Old Hickory, Tennessee, represents District 11.

The Road to Freedom is a project of ADAWATCH and the National Coalition for Disability Rights (NCDR). Visit www.adawatch.org to learn more about the bus and the proposed passage of an “ADA Restoration Act.”
Mental Health Coop Adds Vanderbilt Child Psychiatrist to Staff

The Mental Health Cooperative (MHC) welcomed Sonali Sheth, M.D. to its child psychiatry team in September. Dr. Sheth is charged with further development and supervision of the child and family program in addition to seeing children with serious emotional disorders. Dr. Sheth joins MHC in partnership with Vanderbilt University Medical Center.
