Chattanooga Native Becomes Army Healthcare Specialist

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.— Pfc. Jacob P. Danielson graduated from the Army's Basic Combat Training and then Advanced Individual Training at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, on Sept. 22, 2021.

During this highly technical 26-week program, Danielson graduated as a U.S. Army Health Care Specialist and trained in emergency medical care, patient care, and battlefield medicine. He then returned to Louisville's Detachment 2, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 230th Assault Helicopter Battalion as a member of the medical section to provide medical care and train Soldiers to be first responders.

"I'm excited to serve my community with the skills I've learned as a Health Care Specialist," said Danielson.

Danielson is a graduate of East Ridge High School and currently attends the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga.
