The mission of the Department of Educational Leadership is to provide quality education programs that integrate theory, practice, research, and service to meet the leadership needs of local, state, national, and international levels. Our faculty strives to prepare effective, innovative, and culturally responsive leaders in the field of education, who are capable of transforming organizations to a higher end.

The Leader Preparation Program at Tennessee State University, housed within the Department of Educational Leadership, emphasizes the development of competent and ethical leaders in PreK-12 education. The program recognizes the importance of addressing equity issues and equips students with the skills necessary to navigate complex challenges in ensuring all students have access to quality education. Key highlights of the program include continuous enrollment to maintain momentum in coursework and dissertation completion, high academic standards, and a rigorous approval process for transferring credits. The program encourages students to engage in research topics that explore systemic barriers, culturally responsive teaching practices, and the role of school leaders in fostering inclusive environments. Through a focus on ethical leadership and practical application, the program prepares graduates to make significant contributions to educational leadership and equity in their future careers.
