It is the mission of the School of Education to model competence, character, and compassion so that our students emulate and embrace these qualities in service and leadership.

Trevecca Nazarene University offers Instructional Leadership programs designed to equip educators with the skills and knowledge necessary for effective leadership in K-12 educational settings. These programs focus on developing leadership qualities that help improve teaching, learning, and overall school performance. Trevecca's Instructional Leadership programs are designed to develop well-rounded leaders who can drive change, improve educational outcomes, and foster positive learning environments in schools. These programs are dedicated to producing competent, compassionate, and faith-driven educators and leaders who are prepared to make a meaningful difference in the educational landscape. In 2023, the School of Education achieved full accreditation from the Council for the Accreditation of Educator Preparation (CAEP) at the initial and advanced levels. With a program emphasis on innovation, diversity, and forward-thinking practices, future leaders learn from experienced professionals and proven school leaders, equipping them to drive positive change in Nashville and beyond.
