Children’s Advocacy Days

Spring is coming, and, more importantly, Children's Advocacy Days, March 12-13. We are looking forward to seeing you there. Gov. Bill Lee will welcome participants, giving many of us an opportunity to hear from him for the first time.

TCCY has planned a fast-paced schedule of presentations. Julie Sweetland of the Frameworks Institute and Hugh Vasquez of the National Equity Project will headline the event. Popular features, including young Spoken Word poets and updates from state child-serving departments, will return.

The original Adverse Childhood Experiences study's eye opening revelation was the impact of ACEs, not just on emotional health, but also on physical health and life expectancy. A new report by The Sycamore Institute, The Economic Cost of ACEs in Tennessee: Medical Costs and Worker Absenteeism from Health Issues Attributed to Adverse Childhood Experiences, tells us ACEs also have an economic cost. Analysis finds more than $5 billion in direct medical costs and lost productivity from missed work is attributable to adult Tennesseans who experienced childhood trauma. ### National Nutrition Month

March is Nutrition Month. Newer research continues to link nutrition to aspects of health and living.

TCCY has identified early education as critical to childhood success. Focusing on early education includes focusing on the supports children need to learn. The role of access to healthy food in students' successful learning and behavior has long been documented. Comparing the long-term health of children who received food stamps between 1956 and 1981, when the program was scaling up, and those who did not shows the program's long term success. Adults whose families received food stamps during their childhood had a lower risk of heart disease and were more likely to have graduated from high school. They earned higher incomes, as well.

Healthy eating is important for brain health. It would seem obvious that as brains develop they need to be fed with nutrients as building blocks. A diet high in refined sugars contributes to mood disorders. The neurotransmitter serotonin is produced in the gastrointestinal tract and is affected by "good" bacteria levels and high sugar intake.

Summer is fun. And what makes it fun for most children is the lack of school. For some children, being out of school means eating less healthy food. Children who qualify for free and reduced-price school lunch and breakfast go without during the summer. Nearly half of students in Tennessee public schools qualify for free and reduced-price lunches, but many fewer have access to assistance during the summer. The Summer Food Program was created to address that gap using local sponsors. Ideally, sponsors also provide activities that can also help prevent the loss of learning over the summer. The Tennessee Department of Human Services (DHS) will accept applications from groups interested in sponsoring Summer Food Programs until May 1.

Ford Foundation

The Ford Foundation, created in 1936, is now focused on addressing inequality. The Foundation identified five contributors to the problem: entrenched cultural narratives, failure to invest in and protect vital public goods, unfair rules of the economy, unequal access to government and persistent prejudice and discrimination. Its work in the United States includes protecting voting rights, mass incarceration reform, net neutrality, affordable housing and empowering the workforce to speak. Groups whose work fits into the purview of the Ford Foundation may submit a short form with an idea for funding.
Update

TCCY Southwest Regional Coordinator Rodger Jowers was honored with the Northwest Council on Children and Youth’s Lifetime Achievement Award last year at UT Martin. The two rural West Tennessee councils are a model of the cooperation supported by TCCY. Jowers, who will be retiring in June, has served TCCY more than 20 years.

Data and Communication Director Rose Naccarato’s daughter, Sophie, was accepted to the American Choral Directors Association (ACDA) national children’s honor choir. Students from all over the country auditioned for the select ensemble. Sophie will perform at the ACDA conference in Kansas City.
